

Mutual orientation of inertial and GPS-based and Glonass-based coordinate frames

V. Choliy (1), V. Zhaborovsky (1), S. Kolisnyk (1), and M. Andreev (2)

(1) Kiev Schevchenko University, Physics and Astronomy, Kiev, Ukraine (charlie@mail.univ.kiev.ua), (2) Institute of the Astronomy, Terskol department, Terskol, Russia

During two seasons in 2007 and 2008 there were up to 2000 optical observations of Gps and Glonass satellites made during their passages via celestial equator. The angles of the mutual rotation between optical (ICRF) and Gps-based and Glonass-based coordinate frames are presented.