

Comparison of several wood smoke markers and source apportionment methods for wood burning particulate mass

Andre S. H. Prevot (1), Nolwenn Perron (1), Soenke Szidat (2), Valentin A. Lanz (1), Jisca Sandradewi (1), M. Rami Alfarra (1), Alexandre Caseiro (3), and Urs Baltensperger (1)

(1) Paul Scherrer Institute, Gasphase and Aerosol Chemistry, Laboratory of Atmospheric Chemistry, Villigen, Switzerland (andre.prevot@psi.ch, +41-(0)56-3104525), (2) University of Berne, (3) University of Aveiro

For recent campaigns we will compare and discuss different methods to apportion wood burning in particulate matter. These methods will include aerosol mass spectrometry, carbon 14 analyses, levoglucosan, and multi-wavelength aethalometer data.