

Prediction of earthquakes

László Körtvélyessy
Hungary (drlaky@aol.com)

This prediction seems now to be impossible. Scientists need more data, better models. For example, why does the sea-floor consist of basalt bands? Why do these bands mainly move exactly parallel to the Equator or to the neighbour band? Why do the ridges of the sea floor not contain round volcano craters? Whirl-models are suggested.