

Comparison of wind simulations in HadRM3P and WRF with ERA-Interim

J. A. Añel (1), S. Jewson (2), M. R. Allen (3), C. Mitas (2), and C. Rye (4)

(1) SSEE, University of Oxford, United Kingdom (juan.anel@smithschool.ox.ac.uk), (2) Risk Management Solutions, London, United Kingdom, (3) School of Geography, University of Oxford, United Kingdom, (4) Dept. of Physics, University of Oxford, United Kingdom

In this presentation we explore how realistic are the simulations of surface wind conditions and regimes for the European region using outputs from two different regional models (HadRM3P embedded in a global climate model and WRF) and comparing them with ERA-Interim reanalyses. In particular we focus on simulations relevant for extratropical storms.