Nonlinear models of temporal rainfall: Appropriateness and hydrologic relevance

Carlos Antonio Fernandez-Yañez and Alin Andrei Carsteanu

Instituto Politécnico Nacional (IPN), Escuela Superior de Física y Matemáticas (ESFM), Matemáticas, México, DF, Mexico (alin@esfm.ipn.mx)

We examine the nonlinear structure of temporal rainfall at different scales, analyzing the behavior of such indicators as breakdown coefficients, run lengths, and statistical moments. It is shown that long-range correlations reveal an underlying nonlinearity, of a different nature at small scales and large scales, respectively. A hydrological integration and discussion of results is presented.