

Evolving Turbulence in the Heliosphere

Roberto Bruno

Istituto di Astrofisica e Planetologia Spaziali, Italy (roberto.bruno@iaps.inaf.it)

The heliosphere represents the biggest laboratory where a wide class of different physical phenomena can be investigated by both remote sensing and in situ measurements. The talk gives an overview of some aspects of turbulence which have been investigated through spacecraft observations in collisionless space plasmas.