

Development of the Assessment Items of Debris Flow Using the Delphi Method

Yosep Byun (1), Joohyun Seong (2), Mingi Kim (3), Kyunghan Park (4), and Hyungkoo Yoon (5)

(1) Korea Infrastructure Safety Corporation(KISTEC), Jinju-City, Gyeongsangnam-Do, Republic of Korea(josep0103@kistec.or.kr), (2) Korea Infrastructure Safety Corporation(KISTEC), Jinju-City, Gyeongsangnam-Do, Republic of Korea(bluehill@kistec.or.kr), (3) Korea Infrastructure Safety Corporation(KISTEC), Jinju-City, Gyeongsangnam-Do, Republic of Korea(beyedsoul@gmail.com), (4) Korea Infrastructure Safety Corporation(KISTEC), Jinju-City, Gyeongsangnam-Do, Republic of Korea(pkh2989@kistec.or.kr), (5) Daejeon University, Daejeon-City, Chungcheongnam-Do, Republic of Korea(hyungkoo@dju.ac.kr)

In recent years in Korea, Typhoon and the localized extreme rainfall caused by the abnormal climate has increased. Accordingly, debris flow is becoming one of the most dangerous natural disaster. This study aimed to develop the assessment items which can be used for conducting damage investigation of debris flow. Delphi method was applied to classify the realms of assessment items. As a result, 29 assessment items which can be classified into 6 groups were determined.