

Listening, sharing and networking

Lucie Tajcmanova

ETH Zurich, Institute of Geochemistry and Petrology, Earth Sciences, Zurich, Switzerland (lucataj@gmail.com)

In my contribution, I will briefly introduce myself and my scientific path. I will provide examples that helped me to overcome "doubts" related to my scientific career such as "Am I able to design my own research projects independently?" or "Why should I stay in academy?" aso. I will also discuss what helped me to continue. Furthermore, I will share my experience with organizing informal "Equalitea" meetings which we started at our department at the ETH Zurich. The meetings welcome both, female and male, members of our department from all levels. It is about the power of sharing, listening, networking and creating an environment where everybody feels respected.