

My first fully online course; Learn with me from my experience

Last year I got the instruction to train the KNMI forecasters in the use of GLAMEPS. GLAMEPS is an short term ensemble which is run by the Hirlam and Aladin Consortium. After some internal struggles I ended up creating a fully online course on short term ensembles with an international trainers crew intended for the international forecasters community and interested researchers who wanted to know more. Please walk with me through the process of creating and running this course. See what went good, what went wrong and learn together with me from my experiences to prevent us from stepping into the same pitfalls again.
