

Keynote: Outside the academy: DIY science communities

Lucy Patterson

What would an open science society look like? What might be going on outside the walls of the institutions? This will be a talk about how DIY science communities are prototyping the knowledge society, appropriating science as tool for civic empowerment and cultural practice, and democratising the role of science in society.