

Aletheia: publish research for free, access research for free

Lisa Matthias

Independent researcher, orcid.org/0000-0002-2612-2132

When looking at the big publishers, a few things about the current state of the scholarly publishing system become apparently clear: access barriers need to be removed, transparency and accountability need to be increased, and the economy of profit-driven corporations must transform into a community-based model to ensure that the global society of scientists and non-scientists can benefit from research outputs.