

Start them young, raise them right

Christy Caldwell
University of California, Santa Cruz, orcid.org/0000-0003-2507-7998

Building awareness of research data management practices among early career researchers has been a popular theme, but there are key undergraduate populations as well who can benefit from data curation learning objectives embedded in their class projects. Examples of such key classes will be given, platforms and tools available for assistance, and pitfalls to avoid.